

Connecting Hinterlands. Networks of the Ptolemaic and Roman Eastern Mediterranean and Northeast Africa

New York University – Ludwig-Maximilians Universität München

Workshop organized by Joan Breton Connelly (NYU, Dept. of Classics) and Alexander Free (LMU, Alte Geschichte)

Friday November 10th, Room 226 Historicum:

- 9:00 am: Welcome
- 9:10 am: Alexander Free: The Hermopolite nome and its contacts to the outside world
- 9:40 am: Martin Zimmermann: Harbor and Hinterland in Lycia
- 11:00 am: Joan Breton Connelly: Cyprus, Cape Drepanum, and Yeronisos Island: Places in the Middle
- 11:30 pm: John Lund: Cypriot sigillata revisited
- 02:15 pm: David Levene: The tale of two bad Ptolemies
- 02:45 pm: Kathryn Howley: Transforming temples: religious interaction in the marchlands of Greco-Roman Egypt and Nubia
- 03:15 pm: Veronica Hinterhuber: Connecting the Kushite hinterland – Meroitic centers in the periphery and their role in long-distance trade (Red Sea and Ptolemaic-Roman Egypt)

Saturday November 11th, Room 226 Historicum:

- 9:00 am: John Weisweiler: City and Countryside in the Early Roman Empire and the Later Roman State
- 9:30 am: David Ratzan: Amheida. Tickets to agricultural products
- 10:30 am: Takashi Fujii: Mercenary Connectivity in Ptolemaic Cyprus
- 11:20 am: Concluding remarks

Sponsored by LMU-NYU Research Cooperation Program, the Abteilung für Alte Geschichte of LMU, the Historisches Seminar of LMU and the Department of Classics at NYU